PROGRAMME OVERVIEW

TACTICS is a PEACEPLUS-supported cross-border initiative designed to enhance interoperability, operational readiness and collaborative emergency response capability between Northern Ireland and Ireland Fire & Rescue Emergency Services through joint training, curriculum development and strategic cooperation.

Project and Role Overview

The Training Across Communities for Tactical Interoperability and Cross Border Safety (TACTICS) Project is a PEACEPLUS-funded cross-border initiative that will bring together the Northern Ireland Fire & Rescue Service (NIFRS), the National Directorate for Fire & Emergency Management (NDFEM), and the Republic of Ireland Fire & Rescue Services (ROIFRS) to develop and pilot innovative emergency response training designed to improve mutual aid and operational interoperability across the island of Ireland.

Emergency incidents increasingly require coordinated multi-agency responses, as no single organisation possesses all the resources, expertise, or operational capacity necessary to manage major emergencies independently. Recent severe weather events, flooding incidents, and major community impact emergencies such as the Creeslough tragedy have highlighted the growing need for improved cross-border cooperation, shared procedures, and joint emergency response capability.

While Northern Ireland and Republic of Ireland Fire & Rescue Services operate under different legislative, governance, and operational systems, the TACTICS Project will support the development of shared training approaches and interoperability frameworks to improve understanding, coordination, and effectiveness during cross-border emergency incidents.

The project will be jointly delivered by NIFRS, NDFEM, South West College (SWC), and Mayo, Sligo and Leitrim Education and Training Board (MSLETB), with additional input from Republic of Ireland Fire & Rescue Services and ten Irish Fire Authorities. The project will develop a cross-border Fire & Rescue Emergency Service (F&RES) interoperability strategy and a series of pilot training initiatives designed to strengthen emergency response capability, improve operational coordination, and enhance public safety outcomes.

The Curriculum Development Officer will play a central role within this partnership, working closely with technical specialists and curriculum development colleagues across both jurisdictions to develop accredited training programmes, learning resources, operational guidance materials, and facilitator training frameworks.

The role will specifically support the development of specialist interoperability training within two operational areas:

Urban Search & Rescue (USAR)

Urban Search & Rescue refers to specialist rescue operations undertaken following structural collapse, natural disasters, industrial accidents, or terrorism-related incidents. USAR activities focus on locating, rescuing, and stabilising casualties trapped within collapsed or hazardous structures.

High Volume Pumping (HVP)

High Volume Pumping refers to the use of specialist high-capacity pumping systems during flooding incidents, firefighting operations, and large-scale water management emergencies. HVP capability is critical during severe weather and flood response operations.

The postholder will contribute to the development of joint training materials, operational procedures, facilitator programmes, and accreditation frameworks designed to improve cross-border emergency response interoperability and support long-term Fire & Rescue training capacity across Northern Ireland and Ireland.

Job Title: TACTICS Curriculum Development Officer

Responsible to: Head of Business Development
